

This is not the Digital Diet handout but hang on.

I can't even begin to tell you the problems I've had with creating the Digital Diet. Dead links, locked Blog tools – things I just can't explain. I've been struggling with the DD for several months now.

I've probably had 200 emails with people frustrated by the fact that I have posted the handout, but folks haven't been able to access it.

Anyway, I've spent the past few days exploring the Web to see what others have developed. As a result I have decided to completely rewrite what I have – so much has changed!!! I hope to have a new version up a a couple of days.

In the meantime, take a look at this amazing resource called WebTools4U2Use. You can find it at:

<http://webtools4u2use.wikispaces.com/>

WebTools4U2Use is a wiki created for school library media specialists by Dr. Donna Baumbach and Dr. Judy Lee, University of Central Florida. The purpose is to provide information about some of the new web-based tools (Web 2.0) and how they can be used and are being used by school library media specialists and their students and teachers. Much of the information--including identifying a need for this kind of information--is the result of a survey conducted in 2008 of over 600 school library media specialists about their knowledge and use of web-based tools in library media programs.

Because WebTools4U2Use is a wiki, you can add information to any page. We encourage you to do so! Add or edit anything that you think will help other library media specialists learn more about Web 2.0 tools and use them creatively and productively in their programs. We've also created special pages for each category of tool so you can share other tools or show others how you and your colleagues are using the tools in your programs, or you can use the "discussion" link at the top of any page.

The headings include:

- Audio & Podcasting
- Blogs
- Calendars, Task Management, & To Do Lists
- Drawing, Charting & Mapping Tools
- Photo & Photo Sharing
- Portal & Web Page Starting Tools
- Presentation Tools
- Quiz & Polling Tools
- RSS & Aggregators
- Social Bookmarking
- Social Networking
- Video Tools and Video Sharing
- Wikis
- Online Productivity Tools
- Other Stuff

There are some great resources here. Don't hesitate to contact me at iajukes@mac.com if you have any comments or suggestions.