

Dis-placed installation, 1995

A site-specific work made at Galleri Maltinranta, Tampere, Finland. The gallery was housed in a former industrial building. For the installation, the control panel of a defunct machine was revealed by removing a false wall that hid it. The control panel became a readymade that was presented as an artwork at a staged vernissage that was recorded on video. The false wall was then replaced and for the actual exhibition, the video recording of the staged vernissage was shown in the gallery.

The video was subsequently shown as part of a series collectively titled "Dis-placed" in which similar interventions or restagings were executed.
