

Digital Landscapes: Red Landscape digital graphic series, 1994

An early attempt at combining scanned photographs and digital graphics to create a form of electronic landscape painting.

Due to technical restrictions of the technology used at the time, the images were of very low resolution and could not be produced as large format prints.

Two series were made; Red Landscape and Blue Landscape.

