

Welcome to the mobile code that you have found. Through this tag you will join others in furthering the idea behind what this tag stands for and will help by adding on to the trail of other users who have come upon this tag.

The mobile tag is a sign that is on a constant move depicted only by the idea of time. In some cases the tag is on a constant move only briefly pausing at certain points long enough to get a small window of opportunity to interact with this tag. The other type of tag is on a slower move, it might take settlement for an extensive period of time before moving on to the next point of interest. In both cases the trail can become circular and repeatative, or it can become random and without always having a certain destination but always finding a home.

The link that will be provided below will be for the furthering of this idea, and the sharing of your own personal experiences with the site in which you stand at right now. read the story of the mobile tag, hear from people who have come upon it just as you just have. Some of them could be considered local in a city, or native. There are stories of the good, and of the bad and with your help the line can continue and the territory can be established and you can become a part of a new idea.

the mobile post

The idea behind the mobile post and the freedom trail has two main goals. The first and major goal is to get the idea of the code out into the public eye without keeping it contained to one perminate position. The other main feature is to relate it back to the freedom trail for the tourist who is travling all around the city looking for spots to stop at and see, or just for the bored college kids on a weekend. transportation runs all across the trail, and with this code they would be able to establish where to go and where to stop and start with the type of trasportation they are using.
